"The Club of Friendly Brothers", or more candidly, the "Society of Gluttonous Gobblers", and how we do gobble! There has been much said about the appetites of various clubs in Alfred, but we doubt if we are surpassed by any. And, too, we try to live up to the more literal translation of our name.

Founded in 1916, the club is now boasting of its record enrollment, there being a membership of twenty-five. Although the organization is largely composed of those interested in the Ag school, it makes no distinctions, but has a goodly percentage of college men.

Our aims are to create and preserve an atmosphere of good fellowship, to encourage ideals of worth, to provide a place where all may gather on common ground for a common purpose—a place, too, where the rough spirits may be softened by the influences of a home.

Several years have passed since the founding of this club, but we feel that the present has equaled, if not surpassed, any year preceding it. Never before has the spirit of good-fellowship run at such high tide, never again will there be the feeling of loss we feel, as this year draws to a close and those of us who are never to come back again, turn away and start out alone on our roads to success or failure.

We have joked, jested and jollied the other fellows along, under it all there has been an adherence to the principles upon which our club is founded. We have not forgotten to encourage and develop an atmosphere of clean manhood, appreciation of the relative values of things found in life, and of consideration for others. To what extent we have succeeded after years will tell.
